NEW P.H.S. HEAD GERM FIGHTER

Rupert Blue's Successor Now Abroad Combatting Plagues.

DR. CUMMING

Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, of Hampton, Va., is to succeed Surgeon General Rupert Blue, United States Public Health Service, as soon as the Senate confirms his appointment. He was given this big job on recommendation of Secretary of the Treasury Glass.

"Dr. Blue will remain in the service as assistant surgeon general, doing research work in attempting to find a method of combatting influenza. The new surgeon general took his M. D. degree from the University of Virginia in 1894, passed the public health service examination the same year and entered as assistant surgeon.

In 1899 he passed the assistant surgeon examination and in 1911 became a surgeon and in 1918 became assistant surgeon general in the P. H. S. reserves. He is 51.

Just now Dr. Cumming is "somewhere in Europe" headquarters in Paris. His chief interest in Europe now is to prevent plagues that are infesting that part of the world from getting to America.

It is safe to say that Dr. Cumming's hobby, if he has one, is that of segregating disease and quarantining against it. Before the war he was quarantined at Cape Charles and at San Francisco.

Prior to that he was medical officer attached to the local consul at Yokohama, Japan, and looked after the sanitary conditions of the port.

Mrs. Cumming, who is with him in Europe, is the daughter of Dr. Edwin Booth, Williamsburg, Va. They have a daughter attending Cathedral School, Washington, and a son at Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Va.

Took Bank Funds to Aid Sick Mother-in-Law

Chicago, Feb. 5.—All mothers-in-law are not held in exorcism by the husbands of their daughters. This was proven here when James O. Lawrence, a former bank clerk, pleaded guilty to the embezzlement of $4,000 from the Port Dearborn National Bank a year ago. Lawrence told the court that he took the money to pay for expensive treatment to his mother-in-law who was suffering from cancer.

He said he took the money with the idea of repaying it when he received a legacy left to him by his aunt which became due on his twenty-fifth year. He reached that age since then and had squared accounts with the bank.

"He was working under a temptation which almost no human being could resist," said Federal Judge Carpenter on the hearing his story. Bank examiners who found the shortage on the books, caused Lawrence's indictment a week ago. The bank officials refused to prosecute and Lawrence was sentenced to one year in the custody of a United States marshal.

Gray Letter Causes Commotion

There was much commotion yesterday as to the propriety of Lord Grey's letter to the London Times. From Senator Reed, of Missouri, came the statement that the President should at once cancel Viscount Grey's passports and serve notice upon England that he would be no longer considered persona grata as the Ambassador from England to this country.

The Senator regards Viscount Grey's action in undertaking to influence the Senate to ratify the League of Nations as a most unpertinent and declared it called for the sternest possible rebuke.

Sensor Hitchcock in an interview also discussed the propriety of the letter, but he held there was nothing improper in his writing the letter, because it was done after he returned to his own country.

This statement by Senator Hitchcock is especially interesting in view of the generally accepted fact that the President and other officials of the government regard Lord Grey's action as a discourtesy to the President.

Hitchcock Talked With Grey

Sensor Hitchcock admitted having talked with Viscount Grey just before the Ambassador returned to England, and having heard from him the statement that neither England nor France would object to the Lodge reservations.

The only objection England would have, the Ambassador is reported to have stated, was to the League reservation, which would deprive the dominions of Great Britain of their votes in disputes involving the United States. This reservation was equivalent to the disfranchising of the colonies.

Bandits Caught in Sing Sing Yard Lived 3 Days in Dugout Made Under Eyes of Guard

By Herald Licensed Wire.
Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Alfred Friedlander and Percival McDonough, the "green auto bandits," who were captured in a dugout in the yard of Sing Sing prison yesterday after a two-day search, explained to Warden Lewis Lawes, of Sing Sing, this afternoon just how they made the dugout and how they lived in it for three days and two nights before they were discovered.

The warden was anxious to learn if the dugout had been constructed as part of a plan for a wholesale jail delivery of long-term prisoners, but the two men emphatically denied there were any other convicts in the deal.

They said they worked alone and without aid from others in the prison, digging on Saturday afternoons and Sundays when prisoners were taking recreation.

Friedlander was more communicative than McDonough. "We started on the job last December," said Friedlander. "A few weeks after we got here we looked about for a place to hide away when we got ready to leave. The space between one of the buildings and the coal pile appealed to us, and with one shovel which we managed to steal we started on the job. One of us did the digging and the other acted as 'lookout'."

"None of the guards," except the one on the dock, could see us work, and he only at times. The building and the coal pile hid us from the view of those on the walls and in the yard. The guard on the dock scarcely ever looked our way, but we took no chances, and when it was time for him to pass we hid behind the coal pile. We could not work very fast, as we had to spread the dirt about when the hole began to get big. We finished the job before Christmas, but it was no secret we decided to wait awhile.

"We bought canned goods and grubbed other from some of the boys. We started the work under Warden Brophy, continued it under Warden Grant and finished under Warden Lewis.

"It was very dark in the hole, and, believe me, the time passed very slowly at times. At one time we thought we would have to come out of the hole and give ourselves up, or drown, as water began to leak into the hole when the thaw started Monday. We were caught before we had made up our minds to give up.
